Supporters of the People's Food Policy

On the consultation process:

David Suzuki, chair of the David Suzuki Foundation:

« A broad public discussion about food and food policy is long overdue. I applaud you and your organization for planning these discussions and wish you every success. »

Alisa Smith, author of The 100-Mile Diet:

«Certainly you can list me as a supporter of your process of consulting with average Canadians to create a food policy, as almost all government initiatives are aimed at large corporate food processors and industrial scale farming. »

On the People's Food Policy:

Laure Waridel, Eco-sociologist, co-founder of Equiterre, and author of Acheter c'est voter and A l'envers de l'assiette et quelques idées pour la remettre à l'endroit:

"So that we may eat tomorrow, we have to rethink how we produce and consume today. It is high time for Canada to have a food policy that prioritizes human health and respect for the environment. The People's Food Policy proposes just this path. "

Hans R. Herren, president of the Millenium Institute and co-chair of the International Assessment of Agricultural Knowledge, Science & Technology, (IAASTD):

“I have read through Resetting the table: a People's Food Policy for Canada with great interest and I am pleased to see that many Canadian citizens have taken action to demand a change in a food system that is totally out of control, proposing ideas for what they want to see changed. I am also pleased that the IAASTD report, "Agriculture at a Crossroads" has given the impetus to this action from bottom up, one of the intended outcome of the report. I hope that the example of the Canadian citizens groups that have decided to demand a change in the food system, from production to consumption will make history and be duplicated in other countries.”
